Welcome Apaches!

TJC begins fall term with week of activities

By Belen Casillas
Verve Editor

It's time for parking-spot hunting, traffic jams in hallways, long hours at the library, and delicious cafeteria food!

But before getting carried away explore the campus, make new friends, and indulge in free food which is exactly what the first week of fall semester offers. Starting August 27-30, the Student Life Department and other organizations have coordinated various activities. Clubs will also be recruiting new members and organizations looking for volunteers. With more than 11,000 students attending this semester, it may become difficult to find a group to relate to, and welcome week is the place to be and mingle. There will be something for every one to participate in, from jump houses to karaoke for those practicing vocals, and fun games for anyone with a competitive spirit to enjoy.

"We have a lot of vibrant student life and lots of things going on. Get out of your dorm room and join us."

STUDENT VS WILD

By Delaney Bentley
Staff writer

Starting as a new student in college can be a little scary. If a Freshmen, basic questions will arise that may seem less important or stupid but are actually essential to survive the first week of class. Here are some frequently asked questions from new incoming students.

Q & A

Q: Where can I pick up my TJC lanyard?

A: You can pick up your student ID in the campus safety office.

Q: What is Apache Access?

A: Your Apache Access Account is your everything at TJC! You can receive emails from your professors and advisors, view final and midterm grades, register for classes.

Q: When will I receive my financial aid?

A: Any questions regarding Financial Aid can be answered by calling the Financial Aid Office (903) 510-2385 or visit their website: finaid.tjc.edu. You can also check on your financial aid by logging on to your Apache Access account.

Q: How much time do I have in between my classes?

A: You have fifteen minutes in between each class at the least. (which is more than enough time to get from one side of the campus to the other if needed.)

Q: What do the building codes "T" and "P" mean?

A: On your schedule if you see a "T" under location your class is in Pirtel Tech building. If you see a "P" your class is located in Potter Hall.

Q: What is the difference between the letters "T" and "R" in my schedule?

A: Your class meets on Tuesdays if you have a class scheduled with the letter "T". "R" means it meets on Thursday and "TR" means the class meets Tuesday and Thursday.

Q: Where is the Campus Clinic located?

A: The Campus Clinic is located on the second floor of Rogers Student Center in front of the Rec Room and to the left of career services.

Textbooks: Keeping your eye on the price

Finding the best deal on college books is on top of the priority list for any student and thanks to all the resources, you can find the books you need at a competitive price. After hours of research and comparisons between The College Book Store, TJC Bookstore, and Amazon.com the answers were clear.

For example:

English 1301:	The College Book Store:	New $ 99.75	Used $75.00
	TJC Book Shop:	New $108.00	Used $81.00
	Amazon.com	Use not defined:	$79.80

"You have to think of the big picture of all of this... part of education is your textbook, we try to do what we can for the kids," said DeeDee Hanson, clerk for College Book Store.

Owned vs. Rent

Something to keep in mind when renting a used book is the additional fee when damaged, lost, stolen, or returned late. Also though it may seem cheap, think of the money you will have to pay at the end of the semester. Buying a book is obviously more costly then renting, the advantage is being able to keep the book for future reference.

Used vs. New:

Keep your eyes on the price and don't judge a book by its cover but by

Stuck in maturity limbo

By Taylor Griffin
Editor-in-Chief

"Two roads diverged in a wood, and I—I took the one less traveled by, and that has made all the difference."

It's the finale to one of the most recited poems in grade school, Robert Frost's "The Road Not Taken." Interpretations of the entire piece can be as opposite as the two diverging roads themselves.

I like to think more than one assumption is correct. In some ways, it reflects the traveler's thoughts in a future tense, looking back on his decision to go one way for whatever reason. Another could be the opportunity he did/did not take and his regrets. Alas, others say it's just a man picking right or left at a fork in the road.

No matter the meaning, it's all about decisions and learning to live with them.

I feel like my life has been jam-packed full of decisions, more specifically in the past few years. I've always been told that everything happens for a reason, however I believe that this "everything" is immediately juxtaposed to what you decide, good or bad.

This summer presented a huge crossroads for me—two roads diverged, if you will. I'd say even more so than last summer following my senior year in high school when everything was about learning to start over in a new environment.

I had the privilege of taking on an internship at the Tyler Morning Telegraph newspaper for 13 weeks. It was there that I discovered my fork in the road.

I've always been able to distinguish when it's time to be serious from when it's OK to be silly. I've had my fair share of moments with friends that would embarrass me to think about now, but I've never done anything too heinous. Call me a square, but at least I don't have to worry about those photos hitting Facebook the next morning.

While working at the Tyler paper, I really got a sense of the professional world (i.e. how to handle superiors, the importance of deadlines, etc.), and I felt like the mature person I was expected to be. However, my high school friends were home from college and wanted my time as well. Working 40 hours a week, it was hard to appease both parties.

Of course, work came first, but I didn't mind it. I'm passionate about what I do, so this job only fed the beast. But my friends—who many still don't know what to do with their lives—pulled hard on my strings about it, sometimes making me feel guilty about "ditching" them.

It was hard to make them understand that I just couldn't be at their expense all the time any more (to my dismay, as well). They always had to plan outings or fun weekends around my schedule or without me at all.

I started to wonder if I was growing up too fast or if I was doing the right thing in pursuing a career so early. Looking back on my summer as a whole, I've decided that it's OK and even encouraged to have both: a professional side while still upholding my goofy side.

Balance is the key—you just have to know which side to turn on.

Celebrity presidents: it's all the rage now

When the United States was in the founding process, our forefathers knew that while this nation was to be "by the people, for the people," a leader must be elected as not only an authority figure but also as a representation of our country.

They didn't want a king, czar, or dictator because that was what they fled in the first place. In light of this, a president was named as head of state—a person who would be revered and honored.

The idea of a president has seemed to work with our revolutionary ways of running a country, but until recently with President Obama, they've all mostly kept that sense of authority.

It's safe to say President Obama has made some interesting decisions during his past four years. However, even during his campaign in 2008, President Obama has been looked at more as a celebrity than a true politician.

The American public has completely made him into a full-fledged celebrity for whatever reason. You can thank Facebook and Youtube antics for that.

But the worst part is that President Obama reciprocates the favor. He soaks up every opportunity to seem like that guy who's just like you and me.

Perhaps he thinks that makes him more relatable to the public, when in fact, his presence in the White House suffers for it.

He and his family grace the cover of People magazine, not for his politics but because we seem to care more about Michelle Obama's outfit than her campaign for childhood obesity awareness.

Especially with this election coming up, President Obama needs to step up his game professionally because he certainly has not gained very many brownie points in the past four years. That way, it will train the public to vote for the right reasons, for or against him.

Society should not promote this behavior. He is our president after all, and whether you like him or not, he deserves respect, not celebrity status.

Online vs. Local
Again, price is the key. Online purchases will seem cheaper but once you click on the checkout button the shipping and handling fees will stand out, so double check before double clicking the accept button. Also consider the risk of ordering or receiving the incorrect books, and we all know speaking to a live representative over the phone is not always pleasant. Shopping at the local book store will offer face to face assistance, will keep the capital within the community and any returns can be made at the same location with immediate funds back within their guidelines.

Cheerleading reinstated at TJC with new coach Crystal Lott

A year ago the cheerleading program at Tyler Junior College was silenced due to budget cuts. At that time a promise was made to reinstate the program for Fall 2012. The time has come and the promise has been kept. The team has moved in and begun practicing and preparing to cheer for the football team, the first of many TJC sports teams they will cheer for and public appearances they will make.

The search for a new cheer coach that would lead TJC cheerleaders to the forefront in East Texas as well as in the National arena brought fifteen applicants for the position at TJC.

"The majority of the applicants were from out of state from places like New York, New Jersey, Kansas, and Oklahoma," said Vincent Nguyen, Director of Student Life and Involvement.

Coach Crystal Lott rose to the top and is now TJC's Head Cheer Coach. Lott won two national titles in the Division I Cheerleading while at Stephen F. Austin. She comes to TJC from Tarleton

State University in Texas where she was also the Head Cheer Coach.

One student Lott recruited is Ruben Camacho, who got into cheerleading at the University of Kentucky and transferred to TJC as a sophomore.

"I like it (Texas). It's very friendly especially coming from the North," said Camacho. "It's a gorgeous campus."

Some of the other men on the team are tumblers, but Camacho is one of the stunts on the TJC team.

"It's harder than it looks," said Camacho. "I love it. Hands down this is the most difficult thing I've ever done. Nothing compares physically to throwing another body in the air, and then being able to hold it, catch it, support it, stabilize it, and balance it all at one time."

Lott brought along Coach Demetrius Kelley (Coach D) as her Assistant Cheer Coach. Kelley is from Tarleton where Lott coached him while he earned his Bachelor's degree in Kinesiology. His emphasis was on fitness management as he was also a graduate intern at Tarleton in the weight room where he wrote workout programs for athletes.

Football and volleyball look to build off last season's success

Coming off a 7-4 season record and a five points to a conference championship, the Apache Football Team is looking to get over that hump this season.

On the offensive side the team has familiar faces with two returning quarterbacks, starting running back from last year Ryan Young, three returning receivers, two tight ends, and three returning linemen.

"The returning players offensively may not all have started but have played within the system for a year and are ready to contribute right away," Tyler Junior College Head Football Coach Danny Palmer said. "In practices we get through the plays pretty good because we are not teaching something that is foreign to them."

Coach Palmer wants to implement a Wildcat Offense this year and freshman athlete Lamar Caraway is going to play a vital role in running it this season.

The Wildcat is a set that instead of the quarterback being behind the center receiving the hike, he is either playing wide receiver or sitting out as another position player plays quarterback.

"Lamar has great athleticism and I want to run the Wildcat with him," Palmer said. "I think he'll definitely give other defenses problems."

However, Palmer has decisions to make regarding who is going to fill the other two lineman spots and who is going to be his kicker.

"We have most of our offensive line back but I'm still evaluating who I want to fill those two voids," Palmer said. "And right now I don't know who my kicker is going to be after Isaac (Arrellano) left to go to Tarleton (State), but everything will be situated coming into the first game."

Unlike the offensive, there are seven returning players coming back on defense and the staff has a young group to work with before the season starts.

Players understand the concerns the coaches may have on the defensive side but believe that the hard work they put in can eliminate those concerns.

"Our offense looks to be running smoother than our defense from the start but we still have time and I think we'll be OK," sophomore safety Kyle Buzbee said. "Just coming in I've heard our defense is young but we can't make that an excuse and just have to go to every practice looking to get better as a whole just like the Eight in the morning in the Gentry Gym and the long look on the players faces as another two and a half hour practice awaits them. Even though tired and sleepy, the enthusiasm is still present.

That is what Head Coach Ronda Shirley expects from her team everyday they step onto the court; enthusiasm, communication, and the will to get better.

"I know it may be a struggle for the players to get up this early and practice, but we need to put in the work if we want to have success this season too," Shirley said. "But they can't come to practice saying they're tired, they have to push through because at this point it's all mental."

Most of the team this year consists of freshman with only four returning players with outside hitter Lindsey Jones, middle blockers Ivana Bulajic and Jacqueline Santos, setter Adrienn Amaro.

Those four for Coach Shirley are the leaders of the team and with them they keep the chemistry strong even with many new faces.

"I believe we have good leaders and in these practices I have seen the team come together more which is good before we start the season," Shirley said.

Lindsey Jones also believes with this new core of players that the chemistry is very strong and will prove to be an advantage for them coming into this season.

"We just get along really well and we will have to because we have high expectations for ourselves and going through a long season the team that plays together wins," Jones said
